This whole experience has been really weird to see every day life come to a halt. I wouldn't say it is scary in the way of the end of the world scenario but more of a wake up call for us the people that we should be more mindful of washing our hands and staying healthy. For me it has been pretty laid back more sitting at home than I would like to be doing but it is what it is. All I do is homework, go to work, and when I have time playing warzone or apex with the boys. As someone who works for Walmart we are trying to keep the everything clean and stocked but it still seems that people are buying so many things which makes it look like a real problem.
