SENATOR GRASSLEY TOURS ECI

U.S. Senator Charles Grassley (left) and Des Moines Area Community College (DMACC) President Rob Denson listen as DMACC Electronic Crime Institute Director Bryan Burkhardt (right) describes the College's ECI. Grassley was given a personal tour of the ECI, located on the Ankeny Campus. The Electronic Crime Institute focuses on internet identity theft, software piracy, cyber stalking, internet crimes of sexual exploitation and computer hacking. In March of 2008, a $1.7 million federal appropriation was approved to establish the new DMACC crime-fighting initiative that is designed to educate students and help law enforcement combat cybercrime and cyber terrorism.

NEWTON RECOGNITION CEREMONY

DMACC Newton Campus student Chris Bollhoefer of Newton receives a graduation gift from DMACC Executive Vice President Kim Linduska as President Rob Denson looks on. The award was given during a recent recognition ceremony held on the DMACC Newton Campus. Newton Campus Provost Mary Entz welcomed the guests and congratulated the students on their accomplishments over the past year.

WELDING PROJECTS BENEFIT MANY

Jesse Mulder (seated in wheelchair) of Granger will be able to do some pheasant, duck and deer hunting this fall thanks to the efforts of DMACC Welding instructors Keith Simpson (second from left) and Mike Rahn (kneeling in front) and second-year welding student Mike Loffredo (right) of Des Moines. The DMACC Welding instructors and students made a handicapped-accessible shooting platform mounted to an all-terrain vehicle that will allow persons in wheelchairs like Mulder to hunt and fish. Mulder was injured in a motorcycle accident three years ago. The DMACC Welding instructors and students have been working with the Central Iowa Outdoors Without Boundaries organization to assist these hunters in returning to their passion for the outdoors. Central Iowa Outdoors Without Boundaries members Ron Brown (orange hat) of Newton and John Heck (behind the steering wheel) of Newton helped organize the project. The new shooting platform will be displayed during the annual Newton Fourth of July parade this year.

DMACC Welding students Melissa Paulson (left) of Huxley and Ricardo Becerril of Ankeny show off the audio/visual slide rack they made. Their project is being made into a prototype slide rack to be mounted on a ceiling and used in Des Moines area high schools. It's another example of a DMACC welding project benefitting others.

DMACC Welding student Mark Wendhausen of Huxley displays the lumber rack he cut, fitted, welded and ground smooth as part of a first-year Welding project. The rack will be used to store lumber in DMACC's Architectural Millwork program.

DMACC FISHING DERBY

Two-and-a-half-year-old Cael Fahrmann (right), with a little assistance from his dad, Jeff Fahrmann, shows off the fish he caught during the annual Des Moines Area Community College (DMACC) Fishing Derby for kids recently held at the DMACC Ankeny Campus Lake. Cael is the son of Jeff and Mollie Fahrmann of Ankeny.
