SAB discusses 1999-2000 activity budget

Bob Eschliman
Managing Editor

The Student Action Board met in regular session on Wednesday, March 3, to discuss the fiscal year 2000 student activity budget. Present were President Bob Eschliman, Recorder Kari Hull and At-Large members Jen Kovach and Zach Evans.

Prior to discussing the budget, Evans requested that the board go ahead with the purchase of the second television for the Courter Center. By a unanimous vote of 4-0, the board approved the actual purchase of the television and requested that SAB adviser Terry Jamieson make the purchase.

With no other new business to discuss, the board switched to Appropriations Committee business, beginning the deliberation of funding requests. Acting as chairman of the committee, Eschliman could only vote in the case of a tie vote among the other members.

The total request from all of the campus activities was approximately $21,100. Funding the campus activities at that level would have left approximately $3,900, an amount slightly higher than was available this year for activities.

Eschliman said, "We need to leave as much of the money as we can in the hands of next year's board. If they decide to give additional funding to the activities, that's their prerogative. I'm recommending we leave over $13,000 for next year's board to work with."

The first item discussed was the Drama Club request. The board expressed the unanimous opinion that the $1,800 request was excessive, due to Drama Club's current account balance of approximately $5,700.

The debate was very extensive over whether or not to give any funding to the Drama Club. Jen Kovach recommended $500, while Hull recommended $200. Eschliman said he wouldn't go any higher than $3,500, an amount slightly higher than was available this year for activities. Hull said, "I think the Drama Club has enough money already. That money should go someplace else, where it will be better used."

The next item discussed was the Nursing Students United request of $800. The board expressed unanimous appreciation for all of the services the organization provides for the students on the Boone campus. However, in an effort to provide more funding for next year's board to operate, the board approved giving NSU $500 for next year, with a unanimous 3-0 vote.

The third item discussed was the Phi Beta Lambda request. In a very voluminous statement, PBL adviser Linda Plueger requested $2,850 for next year. Taking into consideration the PBL account balance of approximately $1,700 and the ability of PBL to raise even more, the board approved giving PBL $500 for next year, with a unanimous 3-0 vote.

Next on the agenda was the discussion of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes request. Unlike the other campus activities, the FCA request was sent in by one of the student members, Nick Peasley, who requested $500. The board was impressed with the amount of student involvement in the group, approving the $500 request with a unanimous vote, 3-0.

Next was the discussion of the Athletic Department request. In previous years, the Athletic Department request has been nearly $12,000. This year, the request was only $8,000.

Regarding the request for funding from the Athletic Department, Hull said, "I think athletics needs everything we can give them. As a former athlete, I know how important the funding is."

In an effort to unify the five campuses in regards to athletics, the board approved giving $7,200 to the Athletic Department, while requesting the additional $800 from the other four campuses ($500 from Ankeny, $100 each from Carroll, Newton, and Urbandale) by a unanimous 3-0 vote.

The final item discussed was the Phi Theta Kappa request. PTK is making a change from a ceremonial organization to a fully active campus group, centering on community/campus service. In an effort to provide these services, PTK adviser Lee McNair requested $350 for next year. Choosing to take a wait-and-see approach to the organization, the board approved giving PTK $150 for next year by a unanimous 3-0 vote.

The final budget requests will be discussed at the next regular SAB meeting. Requests left to discuss include: Rotoract ($450), Bear Facts (no specific amount requested), peer tutoring ($2,100), online creative writing magazine ($300), Inter-national Club ($150) and Recreation Club ($1,000). The board stated that the organizations have the opportunity to submit additional requests to next year's board, if further funding is needed.

After all items have been discussed, the board must approve the budget as a whole, at which time slight amendments may be made. After the board approves the budget, Executive Dean Kris Phillips and the DMACC Board of Directors must then approve it, but may make revisions or amendments prior to approving it. (Ed. Note: Eschliman is president of the Student Action Board).
Drama prepares for spring production

DMACC’s Boone Campus spring play, In 25 Words...or Death, is a combination thriller-comedy. The play, directed by Kay Mueller, Boone Campus drama director and speech instructor, features a veteran cast as well as some new faces.

Much of the cast of the fall play, I Shot My Rich Aunt, returns, including Jaret Morlan, Jackie Lloyd, Jay Cue, Taunya Winters, Brian Parrish, and Dee McKnight.

Several new faces appear in the cast as well. Jen Kovach will play Olive Driscoll, and Mike Hiltgen, plays JJ. Hooth. Carla Wood, who portrays Magda, has performed previously on the Boone Campus stage.

The comedy takes place in the living room of Pelican Point Lodge on Rock Island, off the coast of New England. The assembled characters are all winners of a contest in which they had to finish the sentence, “I like Foam-X because...” in 25 words or less.

When the contest winners realize that a far more sinister group inhabits the lodge, the pleasant weekend turns into a hilarious nightmare.

Parrish (Nicholas) said, “The play is going really well so far. We’ve got almost all the set work done. I think the audience will get a big laugh out of this performance.”

McKnight, (Mrs. Pruce) also said the play is going well. “This play is action-packed and hilarious. I think the audience will have a good time.”

She also remarked that this production has tested the performers. “The cast will be aerobically challenged in this performance,” further adding to the mystery.

In 25 Words...or Death will be performed Friday, April 9, and Saturday, April 10. Admission is free to DMACC students with a DMACC library card, and the charge is $5 per person for everyone else. Mark your calendars now: In 25 Words...or Death may have you “dying” with laughter.

Table tennis exhibition draws 150
DMACC Boone Campus student Jaret Morlan attempts to return an “easy” serve from Michael Lui, 12, the US National Junior Table Tennis Champion. Lui and his coach, Houshang Bozorgzadeh, entertained a crowd of about 150 Boone Campus students, faculty and staff during lunch on Wednesday, March 3. Free pizza was served during the event.

Several sessions dealt with the topic of establishing credibility, which soon became the central theme of the convention. Students also picked up some “fresh” ideas for the local newspaper.

On Saturday afternoon, George Stilabower, California-Berkley reviewed the Bear Facts for the group. Although the newspaper did not place in competition, students learned what they could do to improve layout and design based on Stilabower’s suggestions.

Other colleges participating in the critique session and/or conference included Purdue, Central Michigan, Northwestern College, Utah State College, Buena Vista, North Iowa Area Community College, and other community colleges, technical schools, and four-year colleges and universities.

Sunday morning, the winners of the various writing and design competitions were announced. Winners in the two-year school general excellence category included Utah State College, first; Muscatine Community College, second; and the Bear Facts, third.

Bear Facts competes at ‘Best of the Midwest’

Four members of the Bear Facts staff participated in the “Best of the Midwest” collegiate newspaper conference this past weekend at the DoubleTree Grand Hotel in Bloomington, Minn.

Participating in the event were Boone Campus students: managing editor Bob Eschliman, copy editor Patrice Hansen and staff writers Jay Cue and Olivia Hoff. Jan LaVille, adviser, accompanied the students.

“Best of the Midwest” offers competitions and instructional breakout sessions on topics such as newspaper design, choosing headlines and interviewing techniques. Students were also able to share techniques and develop a new network of contacts.

All Eyes on Liddy Dole

Hilary Gaumer
Staff Writer

Elizabeth Dole spoke on Friday, February 19, 1999 at Cy Stephens Auditorium on the Iowa State University Campus. Dole was accepting the title as the Mary Louise Smith Chair in Women in Politics for 1999.

Although she was in attendance to accept this prestigious title, there was an air that she would announce her intentions to run for president in the 2000 elections. There were members of the Republican party there showing support by wearing buttons stating “Dole in 2000” and many were taking their time to add their name to the long list of petitioners encouraging Dole to run.

Dole did not announce what many hoped, though her speech was filled with many things that in time may become part of a well defined platform. She talked about a return to morality, education, parenting and a return to actual political issues.

Her performance was a well-rehearsed chat with the audience in which she told of her jobs under Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush and also of her position at the Red Cross. She told of her struggles being a woman, stating “These are the first words I heard in law school: ‘Elizabeth, what are you doing here?’ Do you realize that there are men who’d give their right arm to be in this law school, men who would use their education?”

Not only is she a lawyer, political figure and the wife of senator Bob Dole, she was the director of the American Red Cross from 1991 until she just resigned that same year ever in 1998.

Dole continued her interest in politics when she took a 14-month leave of absence from directing the Red Cross to help campaign for her husband, Bob Dole, in the 1996 presidential elections.

Not only did she give speeches and show the old “stand by your man” but she also did TV appearances on shows like The Tonight Show with Jay Leno.

In that particular episode she sat behind Jay on a motorcycle, sporting leather and chains. The back of her jacket boldly stating “Bikers for Bob.”

Her personality and willingness to relate to her audience all in the name of her husband caused the fan mail to overwhelm the Dole family mailbox.

All of her accomplishments in and out of politics make her a likely candidate to run in 2000. Her popularity and the controversy will cause liberals and conservatives alike to storm to the voting booths come November 2000.

From winning her first court case, to helping the needy, to holding five administrative positions she has overcome the struggles of her gender and grown to be one of the most liked women in America according to Gallup pole.

West Des Moines campus planned

DMACC—A 23-acre parcel of unincorporated farmland west of Interstate 35 is the future home of a West Des Moines campus for DMACC. The DMACC Foundation will purchase the parcel from the current landowner, West Grand Business Park, L.C. of Waukee.

The new campus, to be known as West Grand Technology Campus, will be part of a 760-acre West Grand Business Park. DMACC President and CEO Dr. Joseph Borgen says, “We’re still in the early planning stages, but this location fits perfectly with DMACC’s plans to expand technical programs in response to market-driven technology needs in the south and west metro area.

“The recent Skills 2000 study defined the need for skills training in several established companies in that area, not to mention the growing needs of several high-tech startup firms. DMACC would have capacity to offer the new Accelerated Career Education programs that businesses need to prepare the next generation of young skilled workers in central Iowa.”

Some of the technical programs now located at the Ankeny campus may be relocated to the West Des Moines campus to free up much-needed space. These programs would be expanded to provide state-of-the-art training. The West Lakes Center, which offers software and information technology training, would also be moved to the new site.

Preliminary plans for Phase 1 call for a single facility of approximately 30,000 square feet. Those involved in the project will be seeking RISE (Reinvest in Iowa’s Sound Economy) funds to help with infrastructure costs, such as roadways.

Spring enrollment up 17.4%

DMACC—Spring semester enrollment at the Boone campus is up 17.4% compared to the spring semester enrollment figures from last year. Last spring, students were enrolled in 8564 credit hours. This year, students are enrolled for 10,059 credit hours. Overall, enrollment at all five campuses is up 8.1%.
PBL State Leadership Conference

Business students advance to nationals

DMACC BOONE CAMPUS--
Members of the Omicron Zeta Chapter of Phi Beta Lambda (DMACC's professional business organization) sent 12 delegates to the 53rd annual Iowa Phi Beta Lambda State Leadership Conference which was held on March 5-6, 1999, at the Boone Campus of Des Moines Area Community College.

Members from the Des Moines Area Community College, Boone Chapter joined over 100 business students from across Iowa in competition for the chance to represent the state at the National Leadership Conference in Chicago in July. College membership in Phi Beta Lambda includes over 200 students statewide.

Colleges that participated in the conference included Clinton Community College, DMACC-Boone, DMACC-Urban, Iowa Central Community College, Mount Saint Claire College, Southwestern Community College, the University of Northern Iowa, Wartburg College, and Upper Iowa University.

All PBL colleges are encouraged to find sponsors to fund the awards given at this conference. The sponsor for the awards in the Boone area included the Golden Corral.

There were chapter, team, and individual events held at this Leadership Conference. Several students attending from the Boone Campus of Des Moines Area Community College placed in the top five in their events. Students who placed first in their events will be traveling to Chicago to compete nationally.

Second place students will have a chance to compete at the National Level if the first place winners cannot attend. All students would appreciate any sponsorship individuals, groups, or businesses would like to give them to help in this effort.

In addition to individual awards listed below, the Boone Campus received first place in the chapter event called "Chapter Website Award of Merit".

Leisel Barrett, who served as past state president of PBL and is currently a member of the Boone Campus chapter, announces this year's winners during the awards portion of the PBL State Leadership Conference held last weekend.

Daytime television
Soap scum or quality entertainment?

First off, whose idea was it anyway to dub these pathetic shows that eat up airtime after something that’s cultural? Opera is an art, not a cheap update on who slept with whom last night and why some woman is ticked because her “best friend” committed adultery with her husband, even though the same slut was out with a different guy she’d met at some sleazy bar. I’m sure right now I have plenty of die-hard soap-opera fans screaming, “They’re not all like that! And don’t you dare talk about Carrie and Austin like that!” Which is my point exactly! I’ve spoken to people who sound as if they personally know these people who don’t truly exist! I have no clue who these characters, Carrie or Austin, are or for that matter what show they’re on, but please-- I thought people had stopped having imaginary friends after first grade!

I’ve seen some people actually stressed out over what’s happening in “their soap.” Don’t they have enough problems in their own life or must they burden themselves with the trials of fictitious characters? Personally, if I’m going to worry about something, it better be worthwhile and not about a broken relationship in a fantasy world.

Girls I know have even arranged their schedules around their favorite shows. Can you get more pathetic than that? “No, I’m sorry... I’d love to go to lunch with you but I must keep my appointment with my pretend friends to give them advice, as they further screw up their lives.”

The only half-way positive attribute of soaps that has been brought to my attention is that they help people who aren’t fluent in English to learn the language because the pace of the program is so slow. Fine, but is the content of these images how we wish to portray our society? Why not have them watch movies from our parent’s era? They’re definitely slow paced and at least they don’t send the image of our country being one big red light district packed with prostitutes and porn shops.

I realize this is simply entertainment for some of you, but most of the people I’ve talked to about watching soaps say that they’re addictive. Understand I’m not out to bash all of you that watch these... but honestly, the quality of these programs leave a plethora of things to be desired; such as a plot, decent acting, and variety. So make use of your time and turn off the “Soap Scum.”

It’s Monday afternoon. One o’clock to be exact. I’m just settling down to an hour of chaos and romance. It’s time for Days of Our Lives. Some people don’t understand the true beauty of soap operas.

Many people picture some lonely housewife when they picture a soap opera fan. Well, I can tell you, first hand, that image is not accurate. I’m your average college student, and I actually scheduled my classes around Days.

Okay, so maybe most fans aren’t as committed as I am, but we certainly are not all lonely housewives. In fact, one of my best male friends is the one who got me hooked on Days in the first place.

So, why watch soap operas, when they are nothing like real life? That’s the point! I watch my soap every day to get away from it all. I get to enjoy the pleasures of the rich and powerful. I get to be involved in a secret affair or a desperate kidnapping. It doesn’t have to be realistic. Half of the movies showing in theaters today are not even close to realistic. When’s the last time you saw an alien walking down the street?

It’s been brought to my attention foreign students watch soap operas to help them learn the language. The plot moves slow enough the students can follow it, and it gets them used to the language.

Which brings me to another point—the plot is extremely slow. Now, some of you may feel that this is a downfall, but for someone who can’t get away every day to catch the show, it’s not a problem. I have, due to an extreme amount of work, missed the last three weeks of my soap.

Last Friday, I was able to tune in. It was as though I’d been watching for the entire three weeks. Nothing much had changed. The things that had changed were revealed quickly and easily. I know people who’ve missed years and can get caught up to speed in a few episodes.

One of the biggest complaints I’ve heard about soap operas has been, “I have enough problems of my own, why do I need to watch someone else’s?” Some of us can make the distinction between fantasy and reality.

I’ve been watching soaps since I was about twelve, and I’ve always enjoyed them for this reason—no matter how bad my life is, it’s never as bad as theirs!
Home ain't where you hang your hat!

Well, my fellow students—it’s time for yet another intellectual rambling from yours truly. My space is limited, so without further ado, I shall climb upon the concrete-reinforced soapbox.

I was thinking the other day about the old adage “Home is where you hang your hat.” Whoever came up with that one was desperately seeking some sort of affirmation, I guess.

In my humble opinion, home is a place in your heart that your mind wanders off to whenever the world just isn’t making sense to you. “Home” is in your heart, mind, and soul and cannot be removed or changed by anyone but you.

Some people are “home” less. These people are typically wanderers in life, going from place to place, seeking happiness. Others have just forgotten about “home.”

After I was injured in the Navy, and knew I was to be discharged from active duty, I made plans to return to Iowa, specifically Boone. Seems like a simple choice for me—I was born and raised here and even would’ve graduated from high school here, had my father not gotten a job in Waterloo. Boone’s obviously my “home” right?

Wrong—my “home” is about two hours to the northeast of here, a little town of nearly 2,000 people called Traer. Now, I can explain the return to Boone quite succinctly.

As most of your fellow students from Boone can attest, it seems as though when you enter elementary school here in Boone, they slap a bungee cord to your butt, so you’re always bound to return, no matter where you go. But that doesn’t make Boone my “home.”

In the eighteen months that I lived in Traer, I always felt welcome. Many of the best experiences of my life, most of which shaped me, occurred in that little town. And once you’ve lived there, how can you forget the winding staircase outside on Main Street or the polka music that always played during Czech Fest? To the people of Traer and folks at North Tama County High School, thank you. Many times, you pushed me to be your best. This not-so-native son is proud of his home and hopes that the lives of today’s young people there are being enriched as much as his was. I just hope that in my lifetime, I make you proud of what you’ve made in me.

And to my fellow DMACC students—if you get the chance this Spring Break, go “home.” Go Redhawk! TAN-STAFF!
Several DMACC Bears receive honors

By Jay Cue
Staff Sports Writer

The DMACC Bears Men's basketball season produced several individual accomplishments. Though the Bears posted a 9-9 record, many fans were pleased with a number of performances the team offered this season.

Improving last year's record by 6 games, the Bears showed the positives and negatives of having only two returning sophomores. The team was young. A number of the Bears had been recruited from around the state and across the country. For the first time, some of these players were offered full-ride scholarships, in an attempt to boost the team's talent and begin building DMACC into a conference powerhouse.

One of the most outstanding of these freshmen was recruited from here in Boone. Andy Carrel led the Bears in many statistical categories this season, including points per game, rebounds per game and blocked shots. Carrel proved he was as lethal from behind the three-point arch as he was on the defensive end of the floor. In one of his best efforts, the freshman scored 20 points and pulled down 14 rebounds in a narrow loss to Wentworth on January 15. Carrel was also given the honor of All-Region Honorable Mention.

Another impressive freshman came from Oakland, Maine. Josh Henderson, the team's point guard, impressed the crowd with his dribbling ability and his tendency to drive to the basket through traffic. Henderson led the team in assists and steals.

Standing 6'4", Paul Christenson, from Denver, Colorado, took the role of the team's big man under the basket. With good leaping ability, Christenson was known, on occasion, to wow the crowd with his aerial shot blocks and dunks. Christenson was second on the team in blocked shots, free-throw percentage, and rebounds per game.

Since the beginning of the season, head coach Terry Jamieson was proud of the recruiting his staff had done to get the talent they had. He was also excited about the two sophomores he had returning, and promptly named them team captains for their abilities on the court and in the classroom.

Rusty Hicks made his final DMACC season memorable for not only himself, but the players, coaches and fans as well. Starting the season as a back up, Hicks soon fought his way to a starting position and scorched the hoop with an entourage of three-pointers and intensity on the court.

Hicks shone brightest in the Bear's incredible 75-74 overtime win at Kirkwood. Hicks awed his opponents with an 8-9 three-point performance, setting a school record for most three pointers in a single game. Hicks commented that this game was his finest memory of the season. He also commented on how it was more than just an individual effort, "It was the team's. [Kirkwood] was rated 10, and we beat them at their place."

Hicks also gathered many end-of-the-season awards and honors. He made All-Region Second Team, the first Bear in over a decade; will be nominated as an Academic All-American and has been asked to participate in the Iowa-Illinois All-Star Game this spring.

Of all of the honors he has received, Hicks commented that receiving All-Region was the one that stood out the most because of the few who get the award.

The second graduating sophomore, Nick Greiner, led last year's Bears in rebounds. He picked up where he left off capturing fourth on the team, averaging nearly three a game. Greiner was an asset off the bench, as a starter. His physical play and ability to score boosted the Bears.

As a team, DMACC didn't seem to have problems scoring. They posted an average of 71 points per game and had a tendency to sink the three when needed. However, DMACC also had a tendency to allow opponents to get a big lead early, one the Bears often found hard to overcome.

The Bears usually dominated the boards, however. They often out-rebounded opponents, and their quickness allowed for them to gather points off of fast breaks.

With the possibility of so much talent returning next year, the Bears could find themselves contenders in the conference.

Consoling a distraught female successfully is one of the most challenging and confusing feats ever presented to mankind. I can't help but wonder if we half-way use it as a cruel joke to watch the male victim of choice flounder. It’s almost as if females internally find a perverted sense of joy through the feeble attempts made to console us, and later laugh as they recall the helpless expressions and lame comments made.

Who on earth thinks, as he’s about to take his girl out on a date, “Gee, I hope she’s really upset about something, so I can console her on the matter and come out looking like even more of a stud!” Which brings me to the “Terror of Tears.”

There are few guys who know what to do when a lady starts crying. They seem to think that she’s made of glass, and if they were to touch the girl, she’d break; to think that she’s made of glass, and if possible, I will present two steps to take when your chick starts sobbing uncontrollably (or just gets teary eyed for that matter):

- Shut up
- Hold her

Guys seem to think that they have to spout off words of comfort. If you actually have that gift (which is extremely rare, I might add) then more power to you, and you probably have no reason to read this, except for strictly entertainment reasons. However, most males don’t possess this and make complete fools out of themselves the majority of the time.

Once when I was upset about something, a guy said to me, “Come on, it can’t be that bad!” Listen buddy, if it weren’t “that bad” do you think I’d be crying?!

I will admit, females do get upset about things that appear to be trivial to guys, but you certainly aren’t going to score points with the girl if you tell her she’s “upset about nothing.” How do you feel when, after your favorite football team loses the game, your girlifen says in a tone that’s a little too chipper, “Cheer up, Bud! It’s just a game!”

If the lady’s distraught, it’s obviously something that is a big deal to her.

So let her vent to you, offer her a shoulder to cry on—show a little compassion here, guys! Maybe you’re not going to have a clue why she’s so upset, but at least you can attempt to do a halfway decent job of comforting her. Oh, and, if she burns you—don’t take it personally.

What is your pot of gold at the end of the rainbow?

“Peace and happiness for everyone in the world.”

“To see if my marriage is actually going to work and to release some pressure.”

“Successful completion of school at DMACC and Grandview and to find sincere serenity in all that I do.”

“Finishing school here and at a university successfully, which hopefully will lead to a lot of cash.”

Goooooooood morning, Boone Campus! It’s time I’ve found a place for all you early birds. You know who you are. Those students who are a little too perky in 8 a.m. classes, while the rest of us do all we can to keep our eyes open. Early birds get the worm, right? Well, how about some pancakes and bacon, or a couple of eggs?

I had to drag my butt out of bed a whole hour early for you morning people, but I found the perfect place for you, right here in Boone! The Whistle Stop Cafe is on Story Street, north of the railroad tracks.

They have a pretty normal breakfast menu—eggs, pancakes, french toast, even biscuits and gravy. I’m sure you’ll find something to tickle your taste buds. And for you late risers, they do serve lunch. The lunch menu consists of sandwiches (hot beef and chicken), burgers, and hot dogs (an item I don’t see many other places). The Whistle Stop also has daily breakfast and lunch specials (some of which do not appear on the regular menu).

So, why should you go to The Whistle Stop Cafe when McDonald’s is open each day for your convenience? Well, that’s just it—convenience! Haven’t you ever noticed how their biscuits sit in your stomach for the rest of the day like a rock? The Whistle Stop serves “real” food!

The cafe also has a bit of charm. It is a typical cafe. There are a few booths and tables, but if you really want to enjoy the atmosphere, you should sit at the counter. Now, the stools were not that comfortable, but you have to sit on them...otherwise you miss out on the fun!

I will warn you of one thing about The Whistle Stop—they have interesting hours. You can’t just go any old time. They are open Monday through Friday, 5 a.m. until 2 p.m., and Saturday, 5 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Now, you can feel free to continue your morning ritual of eating fast food and paying for it for the rest of the day. Just don’t come crying to me because of a tummy ache. I’ll be enjoying my brunch (because there’s no way I’m getting out of bed that early again) at The Whistle Stop Cafe!
