Boone Campus plans building expansion

By DUANNA VINCHATTLE
Staff Writer

It's official! Boone DMACC will be adding a new addition to the Academic Building with construction to begin in July 1993, according to Dean Kriss Philips.

The $900,000 expansion will include six new additional classrooms and a new advanced computer lab. The expansion will be located directly east of the S.E. corner of the main building. Other remodeling of our existing building may be done, if approved by DMACC Pres. Joe Borgen and the Board. It would be a limited amount of remodeling so as not to deduct from this dollar amount.

The new expansion is estimated to be a total of 9,000 square feet with approximately 6,000 usable square footage.

The reason for expansion is the increased enrollment, Philips said.

The building was built to occupy 750 people, which was adequate for a number of years. Remodeling was done five or six years ago which has enabled the building to handle the increased enrollment for now. Enrollment continues to grow and is predicted to keep growing in future years.

According to Philips, the plans for the expansion are in the early discussion stages. He and the Group Leaders from each department have met about five times. Group Leaders, other faculty and staff will be going on field trips to other buildings to get ideas on the expansion to make sure that the expansion is done right.

Dean Philips welcomes input from students and the community on any ideas they have on what is needed for the expansion.

Chicago trip March 21-24

DMACC's Holst Farm Management Institute, located on the Boone Campus, will be holding its fifth annual trip to Chicago on March 21-24.

The trip, oriented toward those interested in either business or agriculture, features visits to the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Also included in this year's itinerary will be a Broadway play, along with the usual open time for sightseeing and shopping. This year, the group will travel by train, departing from Osceola, Iowa on March 21 at 9:28 a.m.

Anyone is welcome to join the entourage. Total cost for train and hotel accommodations is approximately $168 per person based on a double-occupancy room. A $45 deposit is required to reserve each seat. Only thirty seats are available so interested individuals should indicate their intentions as soon as possible.

Here is the Chicago trip cost and payment schedule:

Enrollment up

By CHERYL LINGELBACH
Staff Writer

Last spring, enrollment at Boone Campus was 996 students, while this spring there are tentatively 1,000 students registered with more still registering.

Dean Kriss Philips says, "One reason for this increase is the recession. Jobs seem to be on the decrease, with emphasis on education."

Overcrowding, as well as a need for more computers, are reasons for the expansion now in the planning stages. (See separate story).

PBL prepares for semester

By CHERYL LINGELBACH

STUDENT LIFE

Library News

As students settle into spring semester, here is some information about the Boone Campus Library that may be helpful.

Computer Terminals

The two IBM workstations in the library that were previously used as NovaNet terminals have been connected to the network, according to Jayne Smith, librarian.

"Students and staff are welcome to use them. They each have a color monitor and the picture on them is quite good," she said.

The two workstations are set up to run from drive A and operate with double density as opposed to high density disks. When formatting your data disks for the first time, choose the option—720K.

There will not be a sign up sheet to use these machines but will operate on a first come, first served basis.

Retroconversion

The process of converting all of our books and non print materials to a machine-readable tape has now begun. This process is referred to as 'retroconversion' and is one of the steps necessary toward computerization of our library.

Diane Duncan, a former DMACC student and a recent graduate of Iowa State University, has been hired to complete this changeover for our library.

Career Info Materials

The career information materials have been moved to a study carrel where they will be more convenient and accessible to students.

This study carrel is located just a few feet from the student photocopier in the same area where we have our Novell Network stations and portable VCRs.

There you will find Peterson's Guide to Four Year Colleges, Occupational Outlook Handbook and the Des Moines Register Jobs Book, just to name a few.

Rick Johansen proves that the first week after break isn't all fun and games.

New Year's Resolutions

By AMY GOODRICH
Staff Writer

Here it is a few weeks into the new year and so far I've heard about everyone's New Year's resolution. Here's what they had to say and whether or not they're abiding to them:

Jill Burkhardt: To stick to my budget, which needs work and to spend more time with my daughter.

Jeremy Harris: To succeed in school, which is going good so far.

Pete Egeland: Not to beat up my little brother, which is easy since I don't have one.

Kevin Wright: Not to drink as much as I used to, which I've stuck to since New Year's.

Brian Lee: Cut down on tobacco.

Mike Herrick: Quit chewing, which I've done now for two weeks.

Brett Landon: Gain weight, be less responsible with my drinking and to be more flirtatious. I made those since they're easy to keep.

Larry Ford: To help my wife around the house which I've already started to do.

Rick Johansen: I would like to spend more time with my family which I've done so far.

Ryan Wiley: Do better in school by not skipping.

Elaine Huddleston: Loose 10 pounds and exercise more and I've already lost weight.

Mitch Mobley: Not to drink until Superbowl Sunday.

Mike Nafziger: Quit chewing and drinking until March 19 then lose 20 pounds by April.

Jlenny Silberhorn: I don't have one since I never set myself up for failure.

Jeff Bergman: Make more money and to be more friendly which I'm doing.

Jim Groves: To find a girlfriend and be more friendly.

Larry Ward: Make money and quit chewing which I've done.

Amy Goodrich: To lose weight by spring break and to convince Larry to buy me a new pair of sunglasses. I'll get to that sooner than he thinks.

Daphne Wells: Stick closer to my exercise program which I haven't done yet, and to spend more time with my family.

STUDENT LIFE

A glimpse at college life

By CHAD ELSBERRY
Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered about the pressure of college? I'm not talking about the pressure of a test, or the pressure of deciding what you major will be. Although these two things can be no small headaches.

The pressure I'm referring to involves trying to juggle classes, work and family. There are many returning students here at DMACC. In fact, there are many returning students on college campuses across the country. Following is a look at one such student.

The student I talked to is a 27-year-old wife and a mother of two children ages 6 and 7. I'll name her Carla for the purposes of this story, because she asked that her real name not be used.

Carla has taken classes at both the Boone and Ankeny Campuses. She is pursuing a degree which will allow her to work in the medical field as a Laboratory Technician.

When I asked Carla why she made the decision to return, she responded that her husband was hurt in a work related accident about a year and a half ago, and they didn't know if he would be able to support their family in the future. "Besides," Carla added, "I always wanted to go back."

One of the biggest challenges Carla has faced since returning is finding enough time to get things done. In a typical week Carla averages 26 hours away from home because of classes and 20 hours due to her work outside the home. She also has to find time to do homework along with being a mother and wife. She said, "If the spouse doesn't support, it is difficult. You may even question why you're going."

Carla admits there are some sacrifices which she's had to make. Not having a lot of family time is one of those sacrifices. Furthermore, she said she has had to adjust her goals in terms of grades because of outside responsibilities.

One thing I learned from talking to Carla is that going to college has not only been an adjustment for her, but it has been one for her family also. She said her son adjusted well, but her daughter was a different story. "She was used to spending a lot of time with mom. She was afraid I wasn't going to come back," explained Carla. However, one benefit from Carla's time away is the kids have learned to become more independent.

One bit of advice Carla would like to give to other students who are parents involves child care. She conveyed the necessity of having a good and dependable child care provider. According to her, it takes a lot of stress away from the situation.

Overall, Carla is doing good in her course work, and she is on track to receive her degree in the spring of 1993. Carla summed up her DMACC days to this point by saying, "So far, going back has been a positive experience." I hope it continues to be one for Carla and all other students trying to do similar juggling acts.

Returning Bears

By JEFF CRAIGMILE
Staff Writer

The Boone Bears are continuing their record from last season with yet another loss against Simpson. However, this semester has two new players, Larry Mohr and Jason Kunert.

This semester also said farewell to a few people. The first and probably hardest loss was that of 6'7" Jeff Mulder of Nevada. Fortunately Kunert is 6'6". Terry Fisher, a face from the Bear's past is also gone. Manager Jeff Craigmile has also left the team due to personal reasons. The return of Armond Jackson remains to be seen. Good luck to all those who have gone on to better things.

Joe Dunham was named head coach Sept. 9 replacing Larry Hughes, who remains on staff in the physical education department and Learning Center here at DMACC.

Coach Dunham plans to build his team on the three "D's" (Dedication, Defense and Discipline).

Players are required to meet four basic priorities in order to play. They are:

1. Family.
2. Finance.
3. Education.
4. Basketball.

Coach Dunham's goal is to focus on priority.

CAMPUS VIEW

Question: Do you feel that living in a Rural Area opposed to the City that there is as much of a reason to worry about contracting AIDS or becoming HIV positive?

TAMMIE STEVENS

Yes, because any sexually transmitted disease can be easily received especially if you have many partners like most young people do.

SONJA BOWES

Yes, because the HIV Virus can be latent in a person for many years, thus if they had an encounter with an infected person then moved to a rural area that person then passes it on to new partners in the rural area.

TERRY FISHER

That's why I got married. So I don't have to worry about that.

BILL ALLEY

No, I don't think there would be as big a risk in Boone as Miami, but it should not be taken lightly.

RON CHIEVES

Definitely—The virus has no boundaries. It can hit anyone at anywhere, any place if you're not protected.

STUDENT LIFE

Blowing off smoke on U.S. campuses

By JEFF CRAIGMILE
Bear Facts Staff Writer
and

KAREN NEUSTADT
College Press Service

The glamour of smoking is in ashes in the 1990s, and college campuses are taking a hard look at politics, some with an eye toward creating an entirely smokefree environment in the future.

Many schools are dumping vending machines, removing ashtrays from sight, and banishing smokers either off campus, or to small, contained areas away from non-smokers.

Tucked in the back of school newspapers are advertisements claiming to help students quit the smoking habit. "You Can Do It" or "Let Us Help You Kick That Nasty Habit" spur the headlines encouragingly.

"I don't think smoking among college students is considered cool," says Randy Hurlow, director of communications of the American Cancer Society in Washington state. "It's that they start before they are 18, and by the time they are in college they are addicted."

Yet, many college students continue to smoke.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, a recent survey reflects that in the 20-24 year age group, 31.1 percent of males smoke, and 28.1 of females also have the habit.

People start smoking early—80 percent, in fact, are addicted by the time they are 18 years old. Non-smoking activists are fighting to strengthen laws against underage smoking so teen-agers don't become college students with a major nicotine addiction.

In December, three studies published in the Journal of the American Medical Association found that the Camel logo, "Joe Camel," captures the fancy of more children than adults, and is as readily recognizable as Mickey Mouse by many 6-year-olds.

According to a Dec. 23 article in Newsweek magazine, Camel's cigarette sales to young people rose sharply from $6 million a year prior to using the logo to $476 million today.

While nearly half the students were smoking after the war, since the '60s, smoking trends have fluctuated among college-educated adults over 20, with smoking at its peak in the mid-'70s.

After warnings from the U.S. surgeon general and federal crackdowns on glitzy tobacco advertising, there has been a decline in smoking among people with some college education, from 42 percent to 26 percent between 1965 and 1987, according to the American Lung Association.

The facts about smoking are grim:

- Based on data from the National Center for Health Statistics, smoking is the single largest preventable cause of premature death and disability in the United States and kills more Americans each year than cocaine, heroin, alcohol abuse, drugs, auto accidents, homicide and suicide combined.

Smoking and studies no longer mix on some campuses.

- Americans still smoke 600 billion cigarettes yearly.

- Though there have been many lawsuits filed against the tobacco companies by smokers, recently a $5 billion class-action suit was filed by a group of cancer-stricken flight attendants charging that secondhand smoke caused the disease.

- Only 13 percent of lung cancer patients live five years or more after diagnosis.

What are colleges doing to extinguish smoke on their campus?

This fall, at West Virginia Wesleyan College, faculty and staff members voted to ban most smoking on campus. No sanctions have been created for those who don't comply, say officials, and everyone on campus uses the honor system.

"A growing concern for the health and wellness of our students, staff and visitors has been the stimulus for this policy," says J. David Thomas, college treasurer.

At the University of Washington and other state colleges, young smokers will soon be targeted by a statewide anti-smoking program funded by a $7.1 million grant. Washington state competed with 37 other states to receive part of a $115 million federal grant to research smoking problems in the state.

At Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College in Indiana, the administration did a year-long smoking study and developed policies that left the campus virtually smoke-free, with the exception of a few contained areas.

Students have become increasingly vocal in their opposition to smoking.

"I hate it because most college smokers don't have respect for non-smokers," says Angela Miller, 20, a sophomore at Saint Mary-of-the-Woods who says she is allergic to cigarette smoke. "A lot of people hide their smoking habit because it is unhealthy."

"It's not cool. People smoke because they have friends that smoke. I get mad because smokers always say, 'It's my right to smoke.'"

In August, and for the first time in Kirkwood Community College's (Grand Rapids, Ill.) 25-year history, smoking is not allowed anywhere on campus. A student survey showed the response was overwhelmingly in favor of a smoke-free campus.

Anti-smoking posters line the Kirkwood hallways. The school also is offering smoking cessation classes and support groups for those trying to kick the habit.

The transition to a smoke-free campus is not always so smooth.

Tempers flared at Mesa State College in Colorado when Gov. Roy Romer officially declared "no smoking" in state-owned buildings, ending plans for a new smoking lounge in the college center.

The ban has created controversy surrounding the legality of the declaration, and many question whether the governor can ban smoking in a building that has been supported by student fees.

Though Mesa State can apply for an exemption, it has not done so. According to the Criterion, the school's newspaper, President Ray Kieft inquired as to whether the college center was eligible for an exemption and was told it probably wasn't.

Angry students staged a "smoke-in" in the fall, converging on the student center and smoking furiously for one hour. Their statement: The governor has no right to ban smoking in a building paid for with their money.

"This all started when one student wrote a letter complaining about smoking to the governor," said Richard Reeder, a mass communications student at Mesa State.

Smoke-free campuses are not for everyone.

At the University of Wisconsin at Green Bay, the student senate said a loud "no" to a policy that would make that campus smoke-free.

Chancellor David Outcalt devised a smoking phase-out plan last spring and asked for the student senate's input by Oct. 1. The senate sent a resolution to the chancellor requesting that alternative filtration systems be researched and that ashtrays be placed outside of buildings.

Still, the trend toward smoke-free campuses continues to grow.

At Southeast Louisiana State University, cigarette vending machines were hauled away unceremoniously, leaving just a few spots where cigarettes can be purchased on campus.

All smoking on campus is banned with the exception of dorm rooms, and usually smokers are paired up with other smokers by the housing office. Smoking in any public area, such as the bathrooms and halls of the dorms, is strictly prohibited.

The Tobacco Institute, citing an industry-wide policy not to communicate with college students, declined to say what was being done by the tobacco industry to counter such anti-smoking policies.

Smoking or Non-Smoking—It's not a question.

It's a very disgusting subject. It's the one room on campus that only a select group of campus frequent. The room being referred to as the Designated Smoking Area. It is really starting to get some people burning.

How many of us have walked into the science classrooms 223 and 225 and noticed the distinct aroma of stale cigarette smoke? It's no coincidence that these classrooms are located almost directly above the Designated Smoking Area. However, this may have to remain a tolerated annoyance.

The last time this situation was dealt with was on Oct. 23, 1989. The AD HOC committees nominated at that time consisted of both smokers, non-smokers and reformed smokers. This highly notable group of DMACC staff and interest groups (i.e. SAB, PBL, etc.). Unfortunately all that was established was the Designated Smoking Area located in the south half of the student center.

There are a few drawbacks to this area. One of the prominent complaints has been the second hand smoke in the classrooms above it.

Much of this is due to a change in heating ducts and ventilation when the second floor was remodeled. Finally, upon inspection of the sidewalks around the main building several cigarette remains can be found littering the ground.

There are also portions of this effort that should be commended. Thanks to the signs posted non-smokers are entitled to clean air in one half of the student center and most classrooms (excluding the aforementioned 223 and 225). It should be noted that the other DMACC campuses are not entirely smoke-free either. We are also reminded that smokers have the same rights as non-smokers.

We at the Bear Facts welcome any comments or suggestions on this issue. Please submit a signed letter to the editor to the Bear Facts mailbox in the office. This is a good opportunity to speak out on an issue that effects everyone.

College students feel the bite of the flu bug

(CPS)—Feeling achy and feverish? College students may have picked up more than presents while home for the holidays.

The 1991-92 influenza season was in full swing by the time the holidays rolled around. Outbreaks forced public school closings in some parts of the country.

Flu contracted over the winter break from sick family members or companion travelers can cause illness three to four days later...just in time for the start of the new semester.

Doctors say the only sure way to avoid the flu is to be immunized against it.

"Anyone who doesn't want the flu should get a flu shot," said Dr. Walter Gunn, epidemiologist for the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The shot will offer full protection after two weeks.

"This year's flu epidemic began on the eastern seaboard and in the southeastern states," said Judy Conner, CDC's immunization program coordinator. "It now involves the entire country."

The CDC does not specifically track the flu epidemic on college campuses.

Old standbys for treatment include getting lots of rest and drinking plenty of liquids. According to Gunn, any fever lasting more than four days should be investigated by a doctor.

Brad Anderson & Jeff Bergman—lounging with a magazine in the Library.

We continued our mens basketball season on Jan. 15 when we met the Simpson JV, although we suffered our first defeat since beginning the new semester, we did score a season high 86 points which seemed unimportant next to Simpson's 107 score. Reggie Martin led the Bears with 23 points and seven assists. Dana Scott, Rich Webb, Adam and Brent Krug all racked up 10 points each. The newcomer Jason Kun proved himself an asset to the team by adding 18 to the Bear's score.

The Bears went at it again on the 18th of January with Iowa Great Lakes Community College. Reggie Martin again showed himself to be the leader with a game high 25 points. However, Ia. Lakes Michael Anderson challenged Martin on all areas of the court, and Anderson along with Jeff Heinen dominated the outside game with three 3 pointers each. The final score IGLCC-97 to DMACC-71. Others contributed with team scoring, Rich Webb 11, Brent Krug, Brad Vincent both with eight, Adam Krug with 10 and Dana Scott with seven hard driving points.

Coach Dunham stated, "That we are a young team and we are yet to find our solid rotation with two players on the injury list."

I personally see a great deal of team confidence and a high amount of determination. So let's get out and help the Bears "Beat on the boards."

Make that a side order of condoms and hold the anchovies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (CPS)—Forget extra cheese and pepperoni or two pizzas for the price of one—a pizza shop frequented by college students is offering free condoms to its customers.

The Village Idiot tavern, a hang-out for University of South Carolina students, has held a condom giveaway and now features condom packages on the menu.

The message to students in the condom packages is, "Don't be an idiot." Owner Dominic Como said he started the promotion because of Magic Johnson's AIDS announcement.

Disney issues casting call

(CPS)—Walt Disney Co. is inviting college musicians to audition nationwide for its summer 1992 Disney Entertainment Work Experience Program.

Disney will choose 102 undergraduates to perform in three bands. The program involves 11 weeks of performances, career workshops and special sessions with guest artists at Disneyland in California, Walt Disney World or Epcot Center in Florida.

Benefits include a weekly stipend, a furnished apartment and transportation to and from work. The audition schedule begins Jan. 18 and ends Feb. 16 in major cities nationwide. For information about locations and times, call (407) 345-5701 in Florida or (800) 854-8671 outside Florida.

AIDS message needs to reach college crowd

(CPS)—Magic Johnson's message has hit home loud and clear—AIDS spares no one. Are college students getting the message?

Yes, say two researchers at Mansfield University in Pennsylvania. Immediately after Johnson said he had the disease, they conducted a survey of 612 students, asking one question: "Through which means do you think Magic Johnson contracted the HIV virus?"

About 87 percent answered "heterosexual sex."

Gale Largey, a sociology professor who conducted the survey with professor Richard Fell, thinks the reason students answered as they did was because of "the strikingly strong credibility of Johnson. They really believed Magic."

That fact is significant, Largey says, because "it's what (students) believe that impacts their behavior."

Researchers at the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction at Indiana University, recently concluded a 1989 study of students' sexual behavior that they are preparing for publication.

Preliminary findings show that of the 651 undergraduate students surveyed at Indiana University, 81 percent of the men and 75 percent of the women were not virgins and that students spend an average of two nights a week with their sexual partners.

It also found that 50 percent of men and 36 percent of women had sex with someone they just met and that, on average, students had two one-night stands in 1990.

In March 1990, the Kinsey Institute published the results of a 1988 survey of 809 college students.

"The most important findings from this survey reveal that students engage in significant levels of unprotected sex, including anal intercourse; have multiple sexual partners; and have sex with partners about whose sexual history they may know little," reads the article, written by the Kinsey researchers in "Focus: A Guide to AIDS Research and Counseling."

The study notes the typical respondent was 22, white, Protestant, politically moderate and from the Midwest, which means the information obtained is most likely on the conservative side.

The study also found that:

- More than 90 percent of the students were heterosexual. Of importance, researchers say, is that more than one-fifth of the heterosexual women and one fourth of the heterosexual men reported engaging in anal intercourse.

- In addition, 3 percent of the men who considered themselves heterosexual reported having anal intercourse with other men.

- On average, sexually active college women reported having about six partners, including three one-night stands; men reported an average of about 11 sexual partners, including five one-night stands.

- The type of relationship in which a person was involved at the time of the study—sexually exclusive, sexually non-exclusive or not currently in a relationship—was significantly related to some risk factors. For example, sexually active men in non-exclusive relationships reported the highest number of sexual partners—about 20. They also were more likely to engage in unprotected sex.

- Since 1980, about 25 percent of the college students surveyed said they had sex with someone from one of the 10 cities identified by the Centers for Disease Control as having the highest number of reported AIDS cases. About 30 percent of those students said they did so with a new partner.

"Given what is known about the conditions under which HIV may be most easily spread, there is cause to be concerned about heterosexual college students who engage in high-risk sexual activities," the researchers concluded.

Experts hope Johnson's campaign for safe sex will send a strong message to the college crowd.

Judge upholds ban on gays in military

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)—A Naval Academy midshipman who acknowledged he was gay in 1987 lost the first round in his battle to challenge the Defense Department's ban on homosexuals in the military.

Joseph C. Steffan, who was not allowed to graduate from the academy after admitting his sexual orientation, recently challenged the Department of Defense policy as unconstitutional.

On Dec. 9, U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch ruled that the armed forces must have the power to ban homosexuals in the military if they are to protect soldiers and sailors from AIDS.

In 1987, Steffan, who was a midshipman in good standing, found out that he was under investigation by the Naval Investigation Service for his alleged homosexuality just months before his graduation.

The midshipman admitted to a chaplain that he was gay, and was told by the commandant of the academy that he would not graduate because of regulations adopted in 1981 prohibiting homosexuals in the armed forces.

Steffan will appeal Gasch's ruling to the U.S. Court of Appeals, according to an official with the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York.

Welcoming the New Year with a snooze...

(CPS)—The New Jersey-based Boring Institute has named its "Most Boring Celebrities of 1991," and includes some of the people the United States loves to hate, like Saddam Hussein.

The annual list reflects the people that Boring Institute founder Alan Caruba says have received "massive media overexposure."

Who else could head the list but a woman with blonde ambition?

Writes Caruba of Madonna: "She earned $63 million for grabbing her crotch, but poor Pee Wee Herman gets busted. Go figure? She's parlayed a bad attitude into superstardom, but, thankfully, we can ignore her, even if MTV can't."

As for Hussein, the last member of the list, Caruba asks, "Why is this man still alive? Ask George Bush."

Also in the top 10 is TV talk show host Geraldo Rivera. "Will someone please tell him we just don't care?" Caruba says.

Rounding out the list are William Kennedy Smith, Kitty Kelley, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Julia Roberts, Demi Moore, the Jackson Family and Elizabeth Taylor.

COMMENTARY

BF Editorial

The Bear Facts hopes to include an Editorial/Commentary section in the newspaper this semester. Last semester we received very few letters from the students, faculty and staff here at DMACC.

The publication of the Bear Facts is centered around the Publications Production class; however, this newspaper is intended to be a campus newspaper. This newspaper is a vehicle through which the concerns and feelings of individuals here at DMACC may be expressed.

In addition, any community members at large who read the Bear Facts are also invited to contribute their views.

If you have something to say about Boone, the Campus, or a topic of other interest the newspaper is a perfect place to do it.

Don't be afraid to let your voice be heard. The freedom of speech and the freedom of the press are two valuable rights we have, but they don't mean much if they're not exercised.

Trek lives!

By JEFF CRAIGMILE
Staff Writer

In a galaxy far in the future exists a crew of adventurers who have probably the biggest following in T.V. history. Their latest exploits have been told in Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country which opened on December 6th, 1991. (If you have the movie poster dated the 12th, hang on to it, it will be worth some money in a few years.) This is just one of the many holiday movies which have become popular recently.

Unfortunately, this looks to be the last voyage for the "classic crew." Most of the Star Trek cast is over the age of 60 now, and it is time to step back and let the Next Generation take over. Captain Kirk gives a very touching monologue at the end that put tears in the eyes of most watching.

But fans, do not despair. There is already much speculation over what will be done with Star Trek next. There is a good chance that a movie with the crew of the Next Generation will be made some time shortly after actors' six-year contracts expire this year. Another Star Trek or Star Trek genre type of series is already on the drawing board. Fan approval (or disapproval) will determine the success of any future series.

In the meantime Trek fans can watch the movies, cash in on the merchandising, and video tape the exploits of both classic and Next Generation reruns. For those following the Next Generation, look forward to another episode involving the Borg. Other notes of interest coming up are stories involving Alexander, Worf's son and another Wesley Crusher show.

What did Bush accomplish during his January journeys?

By JIM MCKEAN
Staff Writer

So The President is back from his whirlwind tour of East Asia. At the outset Mr. Bush promised us that this tax-payer sponsored trip would produce "Jobs, Jobs, Jobs." So what was accomplished?

1) The President caught the flu, and managed to achieve "Stomach Arrest" (a government term, not mine) all over the table at an important state dinner.

2) Our country's millionaire auto production execs got a nice free vacation.

3) Lee Iococca and the rest of his auto exec friends got more artillery for a new round of Japan bashing.

4) Finally, Mr. Bush got the agreement that he said he wanted with the Japanese to buy more cars next year.

Does this agreement mean anything, not really. The increase in car production in the United States is minimal. To reach the new production goal there will be no new jobs, in fact the goals could be reached with fewer workers than are currently employed by the auto companies.

Why don't the Japanese buy our cars?

The actual question you must ask yourself is why don't Americans buy our own cars. No matter how much the UAW and the auto companies try to say the contrary, cars made in the late 70s and early 80s were some of the worst designed and manufactured in the history of the industry.

These reputations follow the companies to this day.

Would you buy a car made by the same company that built the one that you had in the shop at least once a month? I sure wouldn't. Japanese people are no less intelligent than the rest of us so they wouldn't either.

Another reason for their lack of sales in the Japanese market is tariffs imposed on imported cars. A Chrysler Imperial costs upwards of $50,000. For that kind of money you could buy an Acura, or even a Porsche.

The final reason that the average Japanese consumer doesn't buy an American car, is because the most common buyer of our cars is the Japanese criminal element. If you see a Cadillac driving down the street in Tokyo, its an even bet that the driver is either a criminal or the second highest group of buyers, a dentist.

With the kind of prices and reputation that American cars have, here and abroad, it's no surprise that Japanese consumers aren't beating down the doors of dealerships. Therefore, any concession to the President on how many cars are imported is just show.

In the long run we Americans should not really worry all that much about how many cars we can sell to Japan. We should worry more about how we can rebuild American product development and manufacturing. To stop our drift toward a service economy.

Computer Logins

Here is some information about the DMACC computer network which may be helpful to students as they sit down to use the computers here.

Student Logins

Students will login using their entire social security number (all 9 digits). A student will have three (3) tries to access the network. If access is denied, the student will be locked out for 30 minutes. After that period, the student may attempt to access the network again.

No generic logins will be used this semester (DMACC or Boone). Students who are not paid Alumni are denied access to the network. This is because of an attempt to make the system more secure.

A student may assign themselves a password once they have logged on the first time. After that when the student logs in a password will have to be entered. Students will be very closely tracked this semester and should a student give another student their login or password, the student will be held accountable. Each student is responsible for their account.

Should a student have registered late and is not on the system, give that student's social security number to Mary Jane Green or Dave Darling in Room 212, or Gary Stasko in Room 201 and the student will be entered into the system.

Boot Disks

No boot disks will be needed this semester to access the network, but a formatted data disk will be necessary. Turning the computer on will boot the machine. Once a login is entered, the DMACC Main Menu appears. Pick a printer destination and then a software package. Be sure to logout when done with the computer. You may not login on two computers at the same time.

Computers can be left on during the day, turned off at night. ALWAYS leave the printers on and the machine beside each printer.

Network Software

The software on the network consists of WordPerfect 5.1, Lotus 2.2, dBase IV, and DOS 3.3

Student review critiques current flicks

(Editors note: Jeff Craigmile, a DMACC-Boone campus sophomore, will be reviewing movies in the coming semester for The Bear Facts. His final rating will be based on a scale of one to four exclamation points as follows: !!!!—Great Film. !!!—Worth Seeing Twice. !!—Average. !—Wait for Videotape.)

By JEFF CRAIGMILE
Staff Writer

There are a lot of bizarre movies that are currently playing. Among them: The Addams Family, Hook, Beauty and the Beast, Star Trek VI and The Naked Lunch. If you enjoy out-of-this-world movies, then this is the movie season for you.

The Addams Family

The Addams Family offered another go around for a group of characters in a long-gone T.V. series. The cast was very well-suited to their roles. Christopher Lloyd has finally found his niche as Uncle Fester. Anjelica Huston also made for a very good Morticia.

who fit the bill. Aside from egos, Roberts and Hoffman tried to personalize their characters too much. This film also loses appeal for those not entirely familiar with J.M. Barrie's Peter Pan and Wendy and the lore surrounding it. The fight scenes involving sword play at times were verbatim Star Wars.

However any negative aspects of this film were overshadowed by a great story, excellent effects and a lot of humor.

Star Trek VI

Star Trek VI is the last hurrah for the classic Trek crew. Devoted Trek fans flocked to see this film. Aside from the regular cast this movie featured Michael Dorn from the Next Generation, supermodel Iman, Kim Cattral and a walk-through by Christian Schlatter. This movie accomplished what Trek V attempted to do by bringing the story of the Enterprise and her crew full circle. This movie did exactly what the late Gene Roddenberry set out to do. This movie is the epitome of all science fiction films. Nuff said.

That's all for this time. Keep your eyes peeled for more coming sci-fi films. FreeJack with Emilio Esteves and Mick Jagger looks to be a sure winner. Naked Lunch with Robocop star Peter Weller is going to be incredibly far-out. Sigourney Weaver is going to return in Aliens3 very soon. Others due out in the future are Batman Returns, Robocop 3, Spiderman the Movie and the continuation of the Star Wars saga—The Clone Wars in 1997. Until next time, straight ahead, second star to the right.

Hook, although appearing to be a movie geared toward a younger audience, is a very adult film. A lot of Hook deals with parenthood and lost youth. In many ways, it brings forth values missed in today's society.

Robin Williams is perfect for the role of Peter Pan all grown up. Julia Roberts appears a bit out of her element as Tinkerbell. I don't know if it was a wise idea to attempt a romantic theme between Tink and Peter. Dustin Hoffman is very enigmatic as Captain Hook.

There are a few drawbacks to this otherwise perfect film that many people would tend to overlook. I think putting three "big names" together was a mistake. Robin Williams was really the only one
