UNIQUE CAREER PROGRAM VISITS MANNING

future accountants, commercial artists and typists are going out their intended careers in an unique new program which was opened in Manning this week, and will continue the next 2 weeks.

The program is unique for several reasons. First, the program is brought directly to the students in a trailer, complete with its own instructor. Secondly, the students actually do the activities that are part of the career they are studying.

Kirk Hildebrand, for instance, is a senior. Although he is not sure he wants to be an accountant, he wanted to know more about the career. In the past, Kirk would have been required to talk to his guidance counselor, read brochures about the job, or maybe visit an accounting office or area to get to know more about it.

Through this new program, Kirk had a "career exploration unit." Kirk has been able to learn about the job by attending sessions in a trailer set up on the school grounds.

He brought a calculator to rate a calculator, and has been given a list of activities to do with it. Monday, he spent a one-hour session exploring the accounting career, and Tuesday he returned for two more sessions' work.

Kirk is one of 28 students who visited the trailer Monday, with 40 the maximum number it can hold each day. Six 2-hr. sessions are being held daily, and the students will return until they finish their explorations.

Careers offered this week include business occupations, according to Jan Springmeyer, instructor. Manning students have shown the most interest in areas such as clerk, legal secretary, accountant, bookkeeping, commercial art, and agri business. Mr. Houghton and Denise Mohr, both juniors, said they have been interested in commercial art for some time. They signed up for the program and were given a

The books are called "Project Discovery," compiled by the Southwest Iowa Learning Resource Center in Red Oak. They have been used several years in various high schools around Iowa, mostly during regular classroom time.

Area XI, of which Manning is a part, is the first district in Iowa to bring the mobile career unit to the local high school. It started on a small scale last year and got into full swing this fall. Each high school in Carroll County will be visited as it is brought to at least 29 schools in the district during this school year.

The career exploration program is closely related to the vocational education program started this year, in which 72 Carroll County students are taking auto mechanics and building trades courses.

The guidance counselors of the area have felt these courses are good to prepare students for jobs, but that one thing was lacking, according to Manning Counsellor, Dennis Van Overschelde.

"How can a student make a choice of an occupation without being exposed to it first?" he said. "The career exploration unit should give them this exposure."

The second of the three units will arrive next Monday, and will include service occupations. Units will be available in child care, (day care, nursery school, and pre-school workers), conservation (forestry, range and grasslands, water and soil), cosmetology (beautician, barber, working with senior citizens), environmental monitoring

(environmental engineer, water treatment worker, etc.), greenhouse work, health careers (RN, LPN, lab tech., dental assistant, dental hygienist), law enforcement (police officer, security guard, community corrections work), journalism (reporter, writer, public relations, free-lance), meteorological careers (forecaster, meteorologist, prognosticator), photographic careers, printing processes, (printer, pressman, photoengraver, stripprinter), religious service occupations (minister, religious education, missionary), social worker, surveying, teaching, travel and tour planning (travel agent, ticket agent, reservations clerk), and working with senior citizens (geriatric nurse, nursing home administrator, aid).

Sept. 22, the trade & industrial unit will arrive for a week-long visit.

The Manning School District will have to pay $1,700 for the visits of the three units, although the majority of the fee will be reimbursed to the school by the Department of Public Instruction through state and federal grants.

Denise Mohr and Jay Houghton review lesson in commercial art activity book.

in hours of work. They said, "Now I really want to do commercial art."

The activity books are interesting and fun, while being informative. Through the use of colorful cartoon characters, the art book directed Denise and Jay to draw a picture from samples provided. It next told them to show it away, "destroy it," because their future bosses would probably do the same to some of their work.

Barb Kalkhoff, a junior, types a form letter as part of clerk-typist career exploration.
At her left is Ken Spence, senior, who is studying accounting problems.

RECEIVED
SEP 26 1975
SUPT'S OFFICE

Dear Mr. Lowery,

The school policy against smoking in classrooms is ineffective. Both instructors and students smoke in classrooms, and will not stop even when reminded by a student (me). The only instructor I know who will not stop smoking in class is Mr. Branigan. I will not attend his drafting class until he stops. Students always smoke in classrooms when no instructor is present. They often carry books into the classroom between classes and then stand around talking and smoking for five minutes before going back to the hall. When smoking is allowed in hallways, the movement of people between the rooms and the air circulation equipment will spread smoke throughout most classrooms.

Smoking should not be allowed in classrooms, hallways, library and study areas, in compulsory situations like registration lines, or at any location where student fees or tax money is used to provide some type of service to students. This change in policy is justified because 1) all students have a right to use the facilities of the college, including study areas, offices (like the placement office), and all activities paid for by the activity fees.

2) Everyone has the right not to smoke.

3) If one person smokes, everyone around him must smoke, too.

Smokers produce soot, CO, benzopyrene, ammonia, and hundreds of other compounds in amounts that are harmful to anyone near them, even in well-ventilated rooms or outdoors. (If you want more information or evidence of this, you could see Science Digest, Dec 74, p. 34)

A simple solution would be to ban smoking everywhere on campus. If you think that suggestion is unworkable, you must at least ban it everywhere a student or faculty member may need or want to be. And the rules must be enforced. Violations should carry at least as large a fine as speeding, and some school employees or responsible student officers should see to enforcement.

Personally, this is a big problem. One of my instructors smokes in class. I have to wait for 20 minutes a day in polluted hallways, and I haven't found 1 place where I can study anywhere at the college. I was more upset each day and finally began making plans to contact the American Cancer Society and the Lung Association, the Civil Liberties Union, Ralph Nader, the state attorneys, and everyone else who might be able and willing to help. But Mr. Wilcox pointed out that the logical first step would be to write to you and perhaps avoid courts and lawsuits and long proceedings. I hope something can be done.
